URETHANE COATINGS

TAKING DURABILITY TO NEW HEIGHTS

If durability and impact resistance are top priorities, urethane coatings are the strongest choice. They're designed to handle tough conditions like hail, roof traffic, moisture intrusion, and exposure to harsh chemicals.

A Urethane system typically combines two product types: an aromatic basecoat for durability and an aliphatic topcoat for added reflectivity and color performance. Compared to many other coating solutions, this combination is known for its ability to better resist dirt pickup and maintain color over time, offering reliable, long-lasting protection.

SILICONE COATINGS

THE FIRST LINE OF DEFENSE AGAINST THE ELEMENTS

If your priority is creating a strong weather barrier, silicone coatings are a great fit. They're solvent-free, highly flexible, and stand up well to ponding water and UV exposure.

Silicone coatings can often be applied directly to many surfaces without a primer, and thanks to their high solids content, they typically need less material — helping save time and labor. Their fast-drying nature also makes them a practical choice in high-moisture climates.

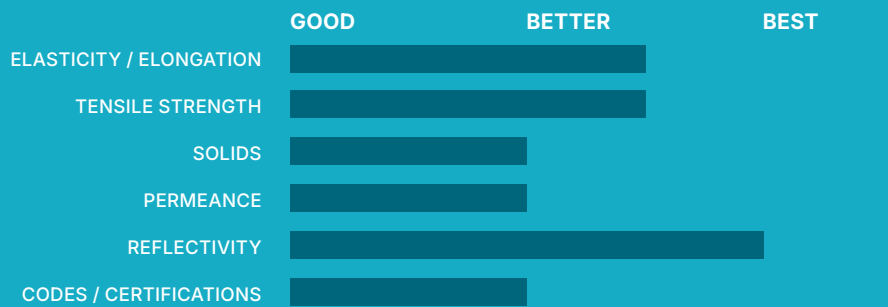

ACRYLIC COATINGS

ADD MORE LIFE TO YOUR ROOF

If you're looking for a quick way to extend the life of your roof while adding a reflective surface, acrylic coatings are a solid option. Acrylic provides excellent resistance to ultraviolet (UV) radiation and is inherently flexible to withstand a roof's instability. Being water based, Gaco Acrylic Coatings are extremely easy to handle and apply. There is no component mixing and cleaning is simple with just soap and water. Acrylic works especially well in hot, dry climates where rainfall is low and ponding water isn't a concern.
